

GuardianView Remote Video Monitoring Lets You Manage and Secure Multiple Locations from Your Cellular Phone, PDA, or Laptop Computer

In today's increasingly security-conscious world, businesses need to watch every part of their operation at all times. It's a sad fact, but it's a fact nonetheless. And because many businesses have multiple locations, they have found it necessary to secure each location individually.

GuardianView for Alarm Verification was introduced by National Guardian Security Services to help companies with multiple locations and complex security requirements simplify and streamline their security processes and help avoid costly false alarms.

The advent of remote monitoring has allowed companies to secure any location at anytime from anywhere as well as reducing the number of false alarms by providing companies with instant verification. You can also control cameras, lights, doors, and sirens from any location, giving you even more ability to control a situation and avoid problems.

Until now, companies were forced to manage dozens, hundreds, even thousands of locations separately. That lack of standardization and central oversight resulted in costly mistakes, false alarms, and lack of budget control.

"Trying to secure our locations the 'old' way was just plain inefficient and not always very effective," states Rick Kohlenbeck, senior manager for safety services at New York & Company. "Remote video verification has improved our loss prevention strategy.

"We chose National Guardian Security Services because they had provided such superior service and response on our burglar alarm system," adds Kohlenbeck. "Adding GuardianView was easy. We plan to roll the system out to our other stores in stages."

Recent breakthroughs in video, computer, and integration technology have made the technology much easier to afford, simpler to install and use, and, best of all, more capable of providing accurate security.

GuardianView offers the ability to watch every part of your business every minute of the day. You can select which cameras and which times. You can monitor live video from one camera or do a cyclical scan of several cameras. No matter where you are, you have access.

GuardianView remote video surveillance lets you keep a watchful eye on everything that happens in any location—check on the opening of your safe; whenever a transaction is cancelled; any time a door opens or closes; any time anyone enters or leaves a secured area; and store openings and closings.

GuardianView emails video events/reports directly to your PDA, even your cell phone.

If you need to review video as the result of theft or vandalism, it won't be necessary to search through hours of video. National Guardian will deliver a video email within minutes after the event, so you can take immediate action. Regular video reports like this can reduce...or possibly even eliminate...the need for on-site guard services. And that's a significant money saving opportunity for any business.

National Guardian Security Services is one of the fastest growing security resources in the country for multi-location businesses and a respected name in retail security. Companies such as Walgreen's, Target, Ben & Jerry's, Borders, Savers, New York & Company, Ruby Tuesday's, and Home Depot rely on National Guardian to protect their people, their inventory, and, ultimately, their profits.

National Guardian provides state-of-the-art security against the dangers businesses can't afford to ignore—burglary, vandalism, employee theft, shoplifting, fire, and mechanical system malfunctions. They deliver every customer a customized, comprehensive, full-service approach to meet every security need. And they design each system to anticipate future security needs.
